British Plane Blazes Trail for Overseas Line

Pictured at the airways base at Fort Washington, L. I., is the British 15-passenger flying boat "Cavalier" after completing the first east-west survey flight from Bermuda. These survey flights are in preparation for the eventual trans-Atlantic passenger service which will be jointly operated by the Imperial Airways and Pan-American Airways. Simultaneously with the Cavalier's flight, a Pan-American Sikorsky clipper made the west-east flight to Bermuda.

Ohio Will Have a "Little Ruhr"

A new "Little Ruhr" is rising seven miles up the Cuyahoga river from Cleveland, Ohio, which will mark it as America's meeting grounds for iron ore and coal. The development is part of the Republic Steel corporation's program of expansion. A $15,000,000 plant, shown above, is under construction, which, when completed, will be the world's most continuous strip mill.

BREAKS NARCOTIC RING

Miss Joyce McAllister, twenty-seven-year-old former Santa Barbara, Calif., college student, whose under-cover detective work is credited with leading to the arrest of seven Chinese and a veteran federal agent in raids on night clubs in the Chinese quarter of Reno, Nev. The sheriff's office and the federal narcotics bureau provided her with $1,000 with which she bought narcotics, thus obtaining information leading to the arrests.

BLIND LECTURER

Miss Hazel Hurst, blind lecturer, shown being led up the gangplank of an Atlantic liner by her "seeing eye" companion, "Babe," Miss Hurst, with the aid of "Babe," was en route to France.

Mariner Plans Sea Cruise in Tub

Ernest Bieganski of Buffalo, N. Y., evidently believes in safety first, for he has put on a life preserver before hoisting sail and moving out into Lake Erie in his remodeled pickle barrel schooner in which he plans to go to Europe this summer if present experiments prove successful. This is the second such boat he has built with his soldier's bonus money. The 1936 model leaked so badly that only the timely arrival of the coast guard prevented its maiden voyage from turning into a tragedy.

Sons of Diamond Daddies Good at Baseball

These four stalwarts of the University of Florida baseball team ought to be pretty good at the national pastime. If there is anything in the theory of heredity. All are sons of famous major league fathers, whose names were household words a few years ago. Left to right are Ed Manning, twenty, son of Ed Manning, former pitcher for the St. Louis Browns; Lee Meadows, Jr., nineteen, son of Lee Meadows, old Pittsburgh Pirates mound ace; Jimmy Shotton, seventeen, son of Bert Shotton, a former St. Louis Cardinal; and Wilbur White, nineteen, whose father once played third for the Chicago White Sox.

THE BROTHERLY LOVE OF JUDAH

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44:16-34
GOLDEN TEXT—Let brotherly love consume us (Hebrews 13:1)
PRIMARY TOPIC—Benjamin's Big
Brother
JUNIOR TOPIC—Big Brothers
INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Loving as a
Brother
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—
Self-Sacrifice in the Family

The fundamental unit of society is the family. It is of more importance than the state, the church, and the social order of which it is a part. The breakdown of the home and the sacred relationships sustained between parents and children, or brothers and sisters, points to the destruction of society itself. God established the family in the garden of Eden. His plan and purpose have never been changed, nor have his laws for the protection of the home, for the sanctity of marriage, for brotherly love, been set aside. Men and nations may devise other plans and follow the dictates of the flesh, but that road always leads to ruin.

The continuation of our story of the life of Joseph and his brethren brings before us today the final and paternal love of Judah, and affords us an opportunity to stress true brotherly devotion. No one should fail to review the connection between the chapter before us and the lesson of last week. Joseph had been dealing with his brethren who had failed to recognize him as the one they had sold into captivity. He was bringing them kindly but definitely to that point of repentance at which he could show himself gracious to them. In doing so he had brought disaster upon them. Being happily on their way homeward with a new supply of food, they were overtaken and Benjamin, the beloved of Jacob, stands accused as a thief, and by their own words condemned to die.

In this crisis the months of the ten others are closed, but Judah, who had really saved the life of Joseph (Gen. 47:26, 27), stands forth to make an eloquent and pathetic appeal to Joseph. It presents him as a brother who is

1. Courageous
They raise the yoke of family life as long as all is joyful and prosperous. But when adversity strikes, when sorrow comes, or sickness, or sin, then the true test of devotion is at hand.

It was a brave and manly thing for Judah to stand before the one whom he knew only as the man who was "seventeen years ago" and whose circumstances were all against him. He expected the flaming anger of the offended ruler. His brethren had collapsed in despair. It was one of those dark hours which come to every family when someone must demonstrate true love by being strong, honest and steady.

2. Intelligent
Crises call for more than a cheerful smile or an encouraging word, much as they do mean in such an hour. But we must be prepared by our close contact with our loved ones to speak and act with vigor and assurance.

The plan of Judah is a masterpiece of logic, argumentation and appeal, demonstrating that Judah was not only well-informed about his family and its problems, but ready to use his knowledge skillfully and effectively.

3. Sacrificial
One who deeper goes the devotion of this man to his family. Had his brother He has done no wrong, that merits punishment, but evidently his brother has been guilty. Had he been of the spirit of Cain he would have said "Am I my brother's keeper?" and let him answer for himself. Why should he suffer for another? Why should he allow himself to be imprisoned in a strange land to save his father from sorrow and his brother from what seemed to be the just reward for his deed?

Thus reasons the man of the world, but such is not the language of love. "Let thy servant aside in stead of the lad as a bondman," so speaks the true brother. And this is but a faint prefiguring of the One "who sticketh closer than a brother," who "though he was rich, yet for your sakes became poor that ye through his poverty might be rich" (Prov. 18:24; II Cor. 8:9). Let us improve the opportunity to review our relations with our own family, to determine whether there is aught that we in intelligent and courageous self-sacrifice should do for our own.

4. An Aim in Life
We want an aim that can never grow vile, and which cannot disappoint our hope. There is but one such on earth, and it is that of being like God. He who strives after union with perfect love must grow out of selfishness, and his success is secured in the omnipotent holiness of God.

5. A Guide to Paradise
The life of a faithful Christian man is a guide to paradise. Thus a

Dates for Dancing
Vera, to the right, has a date for dancing, and when her escort admiringly effuses some such nonsense as, "That gown must have come on the last boat from Paris," she will toss her dark head and say, "No foreign frocks for me, my own." Her dress of soft flowered material with demure braid at the neck and hem almost makes a sweet old-fashioned girl of her, but the tailored collar and trim cut label her the sophisticated young thing that she really is.

FARMERS' COLUMN

THE FARM AND HOME

From now until fall there is nothing to do for the lawn other than to mow it, and then it should not be clipped closely. It is too late to apply fertilizer or to sow seed. Get the mower to cut high, and mow only when necessary. Leave clippings on the lawn.

Shade for pigs, poultry, and other stock will save food in the hot season. When no trees are available, roots can be set up, poles laid across them, and straw, hay, or lumber used for a cover.

A normal colony of bees has 10,000 to 15,000 workers in the spring and increases to 50,000 to 100,000 by June 1. This is the largest population, and the number begins to diminish with the approach of fall, reaching about half the number by October 1.

The striped cucumber beetle is usually on the job, ready to get its deadly work as soon as the plants appear. The control is dusting with one part of calcium arsenate and 15 parts of creosote or land plaster. Dust every three or four days.

If curtains are used in the kitchen they should be made so as to pull aside easily and leave the window free for ventilation either at top or bottom. Full length window screens are an aid in good ventilation as they permit either side to be opened.

Physio-Therapy
Physio-therapy is the treatment of disease by physical and mechanical means as massage, exercise, heat, light and electricity; also the branch of medicine concerned with such treatment.

Garden Cultivation

At the risk of appearing to prophesy gloom, but because it has happened in past seasons, dare the writer suggest that rains may become more scarce as the summer advances. This being likely, it may not be amiss to work toward plans for saving the soil moisture there is, thru proper cultivation.

The most beneficial feature of cultivation is that weeds are prevented from robbing the garden vegetables of moisture and of plant food. The earlier the weeds are stopped, the better, that is to say, while they are still small. At that time, their roots lie close to the surface, and very little effort is needed to remove them.

Time was when no gardener felt he had "worked" his garden properly unless it looked so, cut with deep gashes, "to give the roots air." If there was supporting evidence of roots laid bare, or handfuls of roots on the plow points, so much the better. Such treatment, it was supposed, imparted fortitude to the vegetables, so that they were thus forced to recover. Altho recovery was made in the event a rain followed, always there was interruption until the roots could take hold again; in dry weather sometimes catastrophe resulted.

In the past few years, experiment stations have been giving their attention to finding out just what cultivation was and what it could do, and their findings are briefly this: that when weeds are removed without in any wise disturbing the soil in which they stand, maximum crops result. The "cultivators" in the experiments were razor blades, and the weeds were shaved off just at the ground line.

Altho razor blades are in no sense cultivating tools farmers or gardeners would use, the principle is applied in horsedrawn sweeps or in the best knife attachment on a wheel hoe pushed by the gardener. The blades are tipped forward, so that when these tools are moved, the top half inch of soil is penetrated, the small weeds lifted out, and those that go deeper cut off. A hand hoe may achieve the same end.

This operation requires minimum effort, in contrast to deeper "working" or chopping, both of which are real labor. Also, no interruption occurs in the growing of the vegetables, whose roots, lying at from 2 to 4 inches beneath the soil surface, are permitted to continue gathering moisture and plant food so essential. Furthermore, because these tools leave the surface level and make no ridges thru which extra surface is offered to evaporation, upper soil moisture is conserved, and because the water level is not dropped below root level because of borrowing soil from the middle to make the ridges, deeper moisture is kept available to the plants.

This sort of cultivation will not benefit much those soils that incline to "run together," but neither will deeper working. The remedy for this condition is to raise the humus supply and to use more thoroughness in preparing the garden for planting. The fact remains, tho, that even in such a situation shallow stirring is best, and certainly always, in a garden otherwise so conducted that maximum crops may be expected.

Up to now the dry weather benefits of cultivation have been stressed; paradoxically, the same reasons may be brought forward, should moisture be present in ideal amount. Always, level, shallow cultivation is best.

KITCHEN AIDS

By Janet Houston

AN experienced cook keeps a sort of mental temperature chart, yet she can get confused or forget. Before baking it is the better part of wisdom to consult an up-to-date cookbook as to the temperature for the particular food you wish to bake. A modern automatic gas range with its controlled temperature and uniform oven heat will do the job perfectly if you decide what the temperature is to be. The ingredients of a recipe determine the exact heat in which they will bake best; cooking experts have worked it out for you and set it down in black and white, so you can't go wrong.

Hints for Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

SELF-STARTING electric clocks regulated by alternating current have a definite appeal to the modern woman. These clocks are not only functional time keepers but they come in such a variety of colors and styles as to make it possible to choose a clock that will harmonize with the decorative scheme of any room in the home. Round, oval, clock and charming timepieces in wood and plastic play an important role in room design. The television-normed clock illustrated for example has been specially designed to appeal to the feminine whim. It is styled of glass with mirror finish. Imitation "Chinoiserie" finish on metal makes the dial which is encircled with black etched in Roman numerals. In blue, amber or clear crystal this particular clock makes a charming timepiece for the bedroom or feminine sitting room.

Did you know that by selecting window shades in a continuance of color tone in which a room is decorated the room achieves a feeling of greater spaciousness? Larkspur blue shades—and incidentally Larkspur blue is one of the newest and smartest colors to make its appearance in cloth window shades—have been chosen to create just this effect in a room covered in pale blue where the woodwork is painted in a contrasting darker blue.

This new Larkspur blue window shade has been used with great effectiveness in bedrooms and bedrooms. The color is a particularly good one for bedrooms as it keeps out the glare of the summer sun and makes for cool restful sleepers.

Wire netting was invented in 1844 by Charles Bernard of Norwich, England. He began manufacturing it by machinery in 1852.

JEPHTHA

June 7.—Mrs. Nannie Ferguson returned last week from visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. E. Hibbard, of Lexington, and was accompanied home by her grandson, James Hibbard Jr., who will spend the summer with his grandparents.

Uncle Scott Holbrook and two daughters, Zona and Martha, who have been sick for some time, are able to be out.

Mrs. A. J. Bolin is on the sick list. A large crowd attended the memorial meeting Sunday evening at the home of Elder and Mrs. R. H. Ferguson. The following ministers took part in the services: Elders Harlan Fannin, C. L. Williams, A. C. Bradley, and D. W. Beculhimer. Among those from a distance who attended the meeting were Mr. and Mrs. Harve Litteral and daughter Alma, of West Liberty. At the close of the meeting Mr. Litteral professed a hope in Christ and was baptized by his first cousin, Elder R. H. Ferguson, and was admitted to full fellowship in Union church of Regular Baptists.

THE STRANGER AT THE GATE

By MABEL OSGOOD WRIGHT

ILLUSTRATIONS BY O. IRWIN MYERS

CHAPTER XI—Continued

"Bah! what drive! what cowardice was this retrospection! He had yet several hours before the one remaining train would leave. The office forces had left, he would pull himself together and, thinking he had the cut of steel of his best logic, he would write half a dozen letters that must, that should turn the tide. He swung the green shade over his desk light, pulled it up and reached forward for his papers.

"Why do you do it?" asked The Stranger. He had come in unobserved, so deep had been Vance's reverie, and taken the chair nearest to his desk.

"Because I must. You of all people should remember the quotation of 'Facing the hand to the plow and looking back'."

"Then you must drop the pen-share that demands too much. You are cutting an empty furrow, while the golden seed that should fill it is being scattered by the wind. What is this which you are trying to weigh against the death of a woman's heart?"

Now realizing in full to whom he was speaking, Vance jumped from his chair, calling out haltingly: "What do you mean? Why are you here when I thought you on your way to my people in Westover?"

"My meaning? That you must measure by the depth of your own soul. How came I here? Because Eleanor, who was troubled at your breaking faith on Christmas eve, took comfort in knowing that you would not have to make the journey alone. Poor Eleanor!"

Again! The same pity and from two people of such different viewpoints.

"I believe that I must be hungry, and everything seems incoherent," was Vance's half spoken thought, as he passed his hand over his eyes.

"Perhaps I would better wait before doing anything more until the situation clears itself a little," he said, turning to The Stranger. "Let us dine together, but first I'll try to get a motor to take us to Westover. They objected to leaving me have a man from the garage this afternoon because no one wished to leave town at this season, so that it may be useless." His words came back at him from the walls with a strange dreary echo.

Lifting the phone, Vance leaned heavily on his desk as he made the number, then made his request in a rapid curt way, the reply evidently taking the same form.

"What? No cars for out of town service tonight at any price? Then that settles it. Did I know for what reason my wife sent back the chauffeur from Westchester and would not let him carry out my orders? How should I when I am here in town? But—" here Vance steadied himself with great effort. "If Mrs. Vance dismissed the man it was for good and sufficient reason!" the last words being shouted in ill concealed fury.

Dashing the receiver at its hook Vance asked aloud with a groan: "Why has this been done?"

In a single moment his entire appearance had changed, the inscrutable expression that he normally wore as a mask had fallen away to one of something akin to terror. His face had not a trace of color and the lines under his deepest dark eyes made when Vance's wide eyes and a starting. His appeal was not merely an idle question, it was a command.

"Doubtless for expediency. The same reason that has led you to force young Darrow into your place as your wife's protector three times during the week. Except, only the fact that he is a man like you. The Stranger answered.

"I would do deny Charles with the least of all pleasant companionship to give her all possible freedom. Vance almost whispered through his hand that was raised lightly to his face.

"There are things on the part of freedom that I have honest woman dread, for knowledge that her husband does not depend upon her society and counsel in his intimate hours, when she is freed from this responsibility, does her liberty is merely another name for loneliness."

"But Eleanor shows me the children with her to whom she may turn."

"Children? Yes, but alone they are not enough. Before she was a mother she was your wife, your sharer of plans, with you a dreamer of dreams, a builder of home. What is she now? A mistress, to whom only a few of your early shared hours belong, not your entire confidence. If only your mistress why not another's?"

Out into the street the two men went and stood almost in silence.

Numb with many apprehensions Vance was still conscious of a sense of comfort in The Stranger's presence, that it did not occur to him to analyze.

At last the train pulled out and crossed the bridge of colored lights that spans the East river. More than ever on this Christmas Eve, the dark water made an island of the city and separated its electric brilliancy from the softly dark outline of houses, trees and the gradually receding land.

Finally leaving the main line, the single-track branch road stretched its lither way into the heart of the hill country itself.

"We are due in Westover at twelve I believe," Vance said mechanically to the conductor of the train to which he had changed at the junction, a short freight, a single passenger car taking the place of the usual caboose.

"We are sure due at twelve, but as sure we won't be there, so you might as well get a good snooze, and dream you've hung up your stockings. I won't get home much before my kids haul down theirs, was his reply. "We've got to sidetrack for two trains and they are both reported late."

For a while Vance looked out of the window into the starlit darkness. Then the frost upon the pane grew too heavy to be easily wiped off and he fell into a half-dose, feeling in an indefinite sort of way that The Stranger who sat behind him, and against whom he unconsciously leaned, would keep watch of the night.

By a lonely roadside not many miles from Westover a woman was walking to and fro, stamping her feet that were rapidly growing too numb and helpless to obey her will. Close by, a man, gradually and with fingers so stiff that he did not know that they were split and bleeding, was finishing the adjusting of a new tire on a motor car that stood in complete darkness.

"It is on at last," Darrow panted, getting to his feet and beating his hands. "Do you know, Will, for the last half hour I have been all gone away and, unless I look up through the trees and see the stars, I do not even realize that it is dark."

"Good God!" groaned the man, not realizing that he spoke aloud and shaking her almost roughly, so fearful was he that her words came from the light-headedness of coming stupor. "Can this be the night?"

"It is either the end or the beginning, so what is the difference?" Eleanor said laughing hysterically and catching at his arm to steady herself. "But something is going to happen! I am sure, and very soon. What day is it? I wonder, Christmas Eve or Christmas Morning?"

Picking Eleanor up bodily Darrow propped her on the bare side of the limousine, "let me look to drive the car as slowly as may be and trust to feeling and luck for not getting ditched." He said with a look of cheerfulness. "If we see a light anywhere, when we get in the open, we can leave the car and go to it. This thing is how to keep our feet warm."

"I might as well," said Eleanor, "I need the extra you know, for driving to keep in that courage, so why not?" But first let me tell you my tale and put it to my rest. I shall not start."

"You shall," Darrow begged, "for mine I have words to Emory in only one of his words to Emory."

"Dare I say? This is all his work."

"Stop! Will, you do not understand. I love him, I love him, through that I love all my suffering."

There are insects which mimic some actual object, twigs, leaves, sticks or moss, and in each case the object which the insect has imitated is just what its natural enemies are most interested in, so that it is not likely to attract their eye. For example, the leaf insect, so long as it remains still among the foliage is safe, because the birds, squirrels and lizards which prey upon it do not eat leaves.

"It is on at last," Darrow panted, getting to his feet and beating his hands. "Do you know, Will, for the last half hour I have been all gone away and, unless I look up through the trees and see the stars, I do not even realize that it is dark."

"Good God!" groaned the man, not realizing that he spoke aloud and shaking her almost roughly, so fearful was he that her words came from the light-headedness of coming stupor. "Can this be the night?"

"It is either the end or the beginning, so what is the difference?" Eleanor said laughing hysterically and catching at his arm to steady herself. "But something is going to happen! I am sure, and very soon. What day is it? I wonder, Christmas Eve or Christmas Morning?"

Picking Eleanor up bodily Darrow propped her on the bare side of the limousine, "let me look to drive the car as slowly as may be and trust to feeling and luck for not getting ditched." He said with a look of cheerfulness. "If we see a light anywhere, when we get in the open, we can leave the car and go to it. This thing is how to keep our feet warm."

"I might as well," said Eleanor, "I need the extra you know, for driving to keep in that courage, so why not?" But first let me tell you my tale and put it to my rest. I shall not start."

"You shall," Darrow begged, "for mine I have words to Emory in only one of his words to Emory."

"Dare I say? This is all his work."

"Stop! Will, you do not understand. I love him, I love him, through that I love all my suffering."

There are insects which mimic some actual object, twigs, leaves, sticks or moss, and in each case the object which the insect has imitated is just what its natural enemies are most interested in, so that it is not likely to attract their eye. For example, the leaf insect, so long as it remains still among the foliage is safe, because the birds, squirrels and lizards which prey upon it do not eat leaves.

By a lonely roadside not many miles from Westover a woman was walking to and fro, stamping her feet that were rapidly growing too numb and helpless to obey her will. Close by, a man, gradually and with fingers so stiff that he did not know that they were split and bleeding, was finishing the adjusting of a new tire on a motor car that stood in complete darkness.

"It is on at last," Darrow panted, getting to his feet and beating his hands. "Do you know, Will, for the last half hour I have been all gone away and, unless I look up through the trees and see the stars, I do not even realize that it is dark."

Japanese Rooster Needs Four Train Bearers

Four Japanese children seem to get a big thrill from acting as train-bearers to this prize rooster, held by the proud owner. This type of fowl is common in rural areas of Japan, where the hobby of the farm folk is raising long-tailed chickens. The longer the tail, the more valuable the bird. They take extraordinary care of their pets to preserve the luxuriant appendages.

PETER RABBIT WATCHES FOR SIGNS

SOME people never see things because they never look for them. Peter Rabbit isn't that kind. My goodness, no! Peter is all the time looking and listening. You see, he is dreadfully afraid that he will miss something. So every minute that he is awake he is looking and listening. It was this way more than ever now. Sister South Wind had arrived and said that Mistress Spring was not far behind, and that the funniest way, just because it made him feel so good. Everywhere there were signs, if you had eyes to see and ears to hear them. And Peter had both. The Laughing Brook, which had been silent all winter because Jack Frost had bound it with ice, was laughing a great roar of a laugh, for its banks were very full, and that was a sign. The brown buds on the willows, which all winter long Jack Frost had pinched his hardest and failed to open, had split their little brown jackets at the first touch of the soft fingers of gentle Sister South Wind, and out of them had popped little gray pussies, and that was a sign. Farmer Brown had begun to clean up his cornfield, and that was a sign. There were signs everywhere, and every one of them made Peter feel happier.

But most of all Peter listened for something that he longed to hear. Every little while he would sit up and listen and listen, with his long ears standing straight up. Sometimes he would think he heard it, but he couldn't be sure. Then he would hold his breath and listen and listen and listen. What was he listening for? Why, for the loveliest sound he knows of—the voice of Winsome Bluebird.

"If I could only hear that," sighed Peter, "then I would know for sure that Mistress Spring is almost here, for Winsome Bluebird is her herald, and she is never far behind." And this is how Peter Rabbit happened to forget all about those strange tracks he had found deep in the Green Forest.

He would carefully cover her over again with the dead leaves that she might not catch cold.

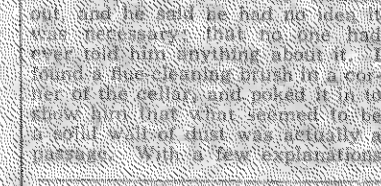

What puzzled Peter was how gentle Sister South Wind, whose voice was hardly more than a whisper, seemed to be the loveliest sound he had ever heard. He had roared and whistled and howled through the Green Forest and over the Green Meadows all the long winter without waking one. In fact, the leader he roared the farther into dreamland the sleepers seemed to go. But when the gentle Sister South Wind wandered through the Green Forest and over the Green Meadows calling in just the lowest, softest voice, why, one after another they did wake up. Peter couldn't understand it, and finally he gave up trying to.

CLEANING A BOILER

LAST winter a neighbor of mine began to complain about his coal consumption. He said that he was burning more coal than he had the previous winter. As the months went on he grew more and more about the quantity of coal that he was burning. I finally went to his house for a look at his steam boiler. My first move was to open one of the cleanout doors about the front of the boiler. As I supposed, the interior was clogged with dust that I wondered that the fire was able even to smolder.

I asked him why he had not kept the interior of his boiler cleaned out and he said he had no idea it was necessary, that no one had ever said anything about it. I found a fine chimney brush in a corner of the cellar, and poked it in to show him that what seemed to be a solid wall of dust was actually a passage. With a few explanations

What to do, I left him to give the boiler a thorough cleaning. He called me up the next morning to say that his fire was burning more brightly than it had been all winter, and that steam had come up in what was an incredibly short time.

As a rule, such a finger of Saturn seems extremely long when compared with the length of the forefinger. Its knuckles are full, with somewhat pronounced slenderness in the spaces between the joints. The entire finger, despite its length and prominence of the knuckles, is pleasing in contour. And while decidedly not overfleshed, neither is it what might be termed "skinny."

The nail tip is inclined to taper, and the nail is usually of oval shape, well set. Under backward pressure the entire finger might be considered stiff were it not for just a hint of flexibility.

A Saturnian finger of this kind, without unfavorable indications in the palm or elsewhere, denotes a clear-thinking, ambitious mind that plans its purposes with care and somewhat selfishly and keeps them very much a secret until the time for action arrives.

We Fool Ourselves

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WE LIKE to fool ourselves. We set the clock ahead, and so we get up every morn at break of day—We could have done it anyway. Sent by the clock we get ahead. We at "eleven" go to bed. But really go to bed at ten—Although we could have done it then.

We like to fool ourselves, and so say things we "own" for which we owe. A lot of little things we craved—We might have owned them had we saved. Then, when a panic comes along, We say that speculating's wrong. To buy on margin is a shame—Although, of course, we did the same.

We like to fool ourselves. To tell the truth, we like to lie as well. Deceive the others so and thus—But no one quite as much as us. We strut around, talk long and loud, And hope to hypnotize the crowd. But this is really why we boast—We like to fool ourselves the most.

The Scheming Finger of Saturn

THE method and manner of one's thinking play important parts in making life a success or failure. A life that is filled with the contentment which comes only from correct expression of the inner self, or one that is restless and dissatisfied through lack of it.

To the experienced palmist, the indication of the outlets through which both conscious and subconscious thought are striving to function are clearly indicated by the characteristics of the finger of Saturn.

The Scheming Finger of Saturn.

The predominant characteristics of this type are: (1) straightness, (2) the manner in which the finger, with hand extended, clings to the side of the forefinger.

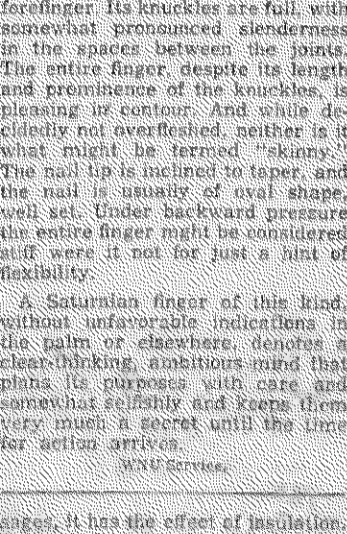

As a rule, such a finger of Saturn seems extremely long when compared with the length of the forefinger. Its knuckles are full, with somewhat pronounced slenderness in the spaces between the joints. The entire finger, despite its length and prominence of the knuckles, is pleasing in contour. And while decidedly not overfleshed, neither is it what might be termed "skinny."

The nail tip is inclined to taper, and the nail is usually of oval shape, well set. Under backward pressure the entire finger might be considered stiff were it not for just a hint of flexibility.

"There's no telling just how far women will care to progress into the world of men's sports," says ironic Irene, "but it will be a long time before we find one who would boast of being the world's heavy-weight champion."

What
S. Cobb
Thinks about

Reporting Allen Criminals.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—

Wouldn't it be lovely if the other states, not to mention the federal government, followed the example set by the govern-

nor of New York?

He commutes the sentences of for-ign-born, long-term convicts so they may be eligible

for parole—not mind

you, to go free and in some more, but

to be turned over to the port authorities

for immediate deportation.

That is, it would be a lovely idea if

only we could be sure that these same criminals, wouldn't come slipping back

in again. The present

immigration law was devised

as a barrier to protect decent citizens, both native and naturalized,

against the human scum of the old world, but it appears to be more like a sieve if we may judge by the hordes of nondescript aliens who somehow manage to get in and stay in and even go on relief, some of them.

In other words, when we give these unpleasant parties a complimentary ride back where they come from, let's make sure it's not going to be a round trip.

Missionaries From China.

FROM Peiping a group of believers

in the doctrine of Confucius are sending missionaries to the United States. We've been sending out missionaries to their country

for centuries, but that Chinamen should dare to try the same thing on us—well, that's a white horse of a yellow color.

What if, not content with seeking converts, these interlopers inculated among us certain phases of their

Western philosophy, such as teaching young people consideration and respect for their elders, and showing that rushing about in a frenzy does not necessarily indicate business energy, and that the natural aim of man is not always to worship speed end—up to thirty-

odd thousands a year—to die by it, and that intolerance as between religious creeds isn't invariably proof of true piety, and that minding one's own affairs is really quite an admirable trait?

Why, native Americans wouldn't be able to recognize the old home-

place any more!

Such threats against a superior civilization are not to be borne.

Vanished Americans.

IT'S exciting to prow around the ruined cities of the first Americans, who scattered into the twi-glights of antiquity when the Christian era was still young. They were our oldest families, older than even old Southern families, and who ever heard of a new Southern family, or even just a middle-aged Southern family?

But afterwards, it's confusing to read the theories of the expert researchers who have passed judgment on those vanished cliff-dwelling peoples, because few such learned gentlemen agree on any single point. There is one very eminent authority who invariably insists that all the rest of the eminent authorities are absolutely wrong about everything. He is the

Mrs. Justice McNeely of the archaeologists.

After reading some of the conflicting literature on this subject, I've decided that a true scientist is one who is positive there are no other true scientists.

Unemployment Statistics.

THANKS to bright young bureaucrats in Washington, we know how many goldfish are hatched every year and what the gross annual yield of guinea pigs is, and the exact proportion of albinos born in any given period, but it never seemed to occur to anybody to compile reasonably accurate statistics on unemployment.

Yet, with depression behind us

and business up to boom time levels,

it's estimated that between eight and nine million people are out of work, not counting those on strike,

and judging by the papers there must be a couple of million of them.

Apparently the more prosperous we grow on the surface, the more deplorable becomes the status of those off the payroll. It doesn't make sense. Or anyhow there was a time when it wouldn't have made sense.

This curious situation puts a fellow in mind of the old old story of the chap whose wife had an operation, and every day when he called at the hospital, he was told the patient showed improvement.

One morning, as he came away,

weeping, he met a friend.

"How's the wife?" inquired the latter.

"She's dead."

"I'm so sorry," said the friend.

"What did she die of?"

"Improvements," said the widow.

Household Hints

By BETTY WELLS

THIS summer's bride should wear something old and something new to the altar by all means,

and even something borrowed if she must be literal. But she might save the "something blue" for the theme of the bedroom in the new home.

Because men like blue rooms—remember when the most romantic song a young swain could croon into the ears of his lady love had words

that said something about a "blue room far away upstairs?"

A blue room that would please everybody, even the bank book, might be papered in ice blue with a tiny white floral pattern in it, with woodwork painted this same ice

blue. The draperies could be white plaid chintz with mulberry red ball fringe for a finish. The dressing

table could also have a white chintz

skirt with ball fringe for trimming

and a pair of slipper chairs might be ship covered in a mulberry and white figured chintz. (Use that fine

vibrant shade of palace mulberry that's come "in" with the Williamsburg, Va., restorations.)

Cherry would be nice for the furniture in this room—in a pleasant colonial design. And on the bed a quilted, apricot muslin, of the mulberry and white chintz—have it just big enough to fall about four inches

over the sides of the bed to overlap

a flounce of white pleated chintz.

A deep blue bedroom rug would be a satisfying finish for the room, yet expensive. Lumps in pale blue and white and accessories in blue porcelain for accent.

That's a bride's room that even the groom could feel at home in,

yet it has allure, too, for all its simplicity.

Sentimental.

We've been thinking of English homes in terms of roast beef for long enough. Now we are rebuked properly—a new series of model

rooms recently shown in London are as sentimental as strawberry soda.

The theme of the design of each room is the personality of the owner,

and the colors are selected because of their becomingness to her.

The theory—we approve of it—is that a lady's own home should set her off at her best.

And so there's a room for a bris-nette in corn color, light maple and beige, with accents of cerise. For a Titian haired woman there's a room with pale green walls and curtains, with carpet, furniture coverings and accessories in Parma violet shades. The bed is set in a niche

papered in light green with a mauve

and silver pattern, and silver metal bed.

Colors in Interior Decoration That

Set a Lady Off at Her Best.

lic cloth upholsters the headboard

of the bed.

The room for a blonde has pale blue walls and pale blue satin draperies, a plum colored carpet and plum satin love seats piped in blue.

A bench covered in blue and accessories in blue morocco. The furniture here is walnut.

For a silver haired woman,

there's a lovely little room with powder pink walls, quite pale, a pale gray rug with pastel flowers

in it, quite modern furniture in a gray exotic wood, furniture coverings in powder blue satin and in mauve satin.

Most of these wouldn't be rooms

to take a family in, that's true,

but they are interesting and magnificent, and full of bright ideas in colors that can be adapted to more practical versions.
